THE GOAT TEACHES DANCING.

"Dance, goatkins, dance,
Or you shall feel the whip;
Vulgar goats know how to prance,
But you must learn to trip
On the light fantastic toe.
Balance yourselves—ah, just so!
There! that's better—now, Miss Kitty,
Hold your head up and look pretty."

THE PERFORMING MONKEYS.

When circus tricks we monkeys try,
We're always in a scrape, sir;
For where's the ape could graceful look,
While jumping through a paper?

And then, sir, don't be hard on us,
Or ready to condemn,
But recollect our ancestry,
And put it down to them.

Father loses his hat.

CAUGHT IN A STORM.

The party are caught in a shower,
Which knocks the poor little goats flat;
Oh, see how their father can cower
As he feels the gust sweep off his hat.
His children are sprawling before him,
His umbrella is turned inside out,
And he says, while a shiver comes o'er him,
"My wife will kick up such a rout!
My glasses are gone and the children wet through!
Oh! what shall I do now? Oh! what shall I do?"

Where have you been, mother dear?

GOOD LITTLE KIDS.

"Oh! what have you brought in the basket?
And where have you been, mother, dear?
Don't frown, for you know we must ask it,
We've been good little kids, never fear!"
They were dancing—poor Kitty and Billy—
And Signor Capri rapped their toes.
"Oh, mammy! those lessons are silly,
And he waddles himself like the crows.
Just give us these tarts we see wrapped up in paper,
And you'll see with what elegant grace we can caper."
